Amanda (Amy) L. Good serves as the Chief Executive Officer of Alternatives For Girls. Top executive of AFG since 1988, Ms. Good holds a BA in Psychology and an MSW, both from the University of Michigan. A Detroit resident since 1982, Ms. Good has over 20 years experience managing and directing human services programs serving children and families in Detroit, including directing a child abuse and neglect program just prior to helping to launch the grassroots effort that created AFG in 1987. Under her leadership, Alternatives For Girls has grown from a volunteer-led project to a full-service human service agency serving homeless and high-risk girls and young women, along with their families, through street outreach, emergency shelter, transition to independent living, and prevention services. Ms. Good's Alternatives For Girls: A Community Development Model for Homeless and High-Risk Girls and Young Women was published in the May/June 1992 issue of Children & Youth Services Review. Ms. Good's awards include the Leadership Detroit "Leadership Challenge" award; Executive Director of the Year award, United Way Community Services; and Oprah Winfrey's "Use Your Life" Angel Network award.
