Biography and Statement of Interest

I am a fourth-generation Wyoming cattle rancher. A product of Wyoming public schools, I started as a first grader in a one-room school house with one teacher for grades 1-8. This path took me to Bryn Mawr College in Pennsylvania where I followed my interest in sociology and found a passion for art. I later studied civil engineering. In addition to cattle production, I worked for WYDOT for over 18 years. I greatly enjoy reading, skiing, hiking, quilting, jewelry-making, traveling and hosting parties for friends and family. Raising a child is the most rewarding and challenging thing I have ever done, and my family is very important to me. Working with and for kids falls into a solid second place!

I have been active in my community since childhood, first as a Girl Scout, library volunteer, etc. That commitment followed me into adulthood, including service as a county library system trustee, area chamber of commerce government affairs committee, lobbying training, speaking to social studies students about all the ways in which politics impacts their lives and how they can be heard, various political activities such as hosting bi-partisan candidates forums, United Way, Weston County Gymkhana series manager, County Fair building superintendent, 4-H, etc.

Most dear to my heart is my last several years as the volunteer art project director and grant writer for my son's small rural school. We have obtained over 50 fine art prints for our own gallery, and add student work every year. We explore nearly all forms of art, including that from many world cultures. The students have won numerous awards at their local district art show, and were recipients of a Wyoming Historical Society award for their studies of Chief Washakie and artwork in the style of the Shoshone and Arapaho Tribes. I also directed musicals in May and December of 2005. This winter eight K-5 students learned twelve songs and their lines, which was truly a grand experience for all of us involved. Spending time each and every week in the classroom gives me a unique perspective, especially since I am not an educator by profession, and it makes me a better state board and NASBE board member, and advocate for public education.

I was honored to accept a gubernatorial appointment to the Wyoming State Board of Education in 2003. My association with NASBE, starting with the New Board Members Institute, followed by attendance at the National Conference, participation in the Government Affairs Committee and a NASBE symposium, and election to the NASBE Board of Directors by my western colleagues have greatly enhanced my abilities as a state board member. I am much more aware of the ramifications of various issues, NCLB, IDEA funding, etc., on other states, and have also learned much that I share with my own state board. I have been a strong advocate for public education, lay governance and for NASBE itself as I work with my congressional delegation, legislators and education policy makers around my state and the region.

Public education is the foundation of a free, democratic and successful society. There can be little that is more important to our future as individuals, as families, as communities and as a nation. State board members around the country recognize the vital role they play and take their work very seriously. NASBE's assistance provides additional resources that are incredibly important.

I am so proud of what NASBE does for state boards, and so grateful for the help they have given me and my state board. Our study groups and GAC do truly outstanding work. NASBE staff should be very proud of the grants they have obtained and the work they do on the myriad issues that we face in education. "The State Education Standard" and our superb study group reports are world class publications, and much sought after by policy makers and others in the education arena. [I know my legislators appreciate them!] I have heard time and time again how much state board members from around this nation appreciate what they learn at our outstanding national conference, and from their participation in symposia, committees and study groups. I know that NASBE's technical assistance, and visits to retreats and meetings in many states have been extremely valuable to so many of our colleagues.

Many issues face us as state board members, curriculum, finance, charter schools, special education, high school reform, the movement to a P-20 model, family involvement, diversity, teacher quality, recruitment and retention, students at risk, attempts to remove lay governance from public education, assessments and growth models and special education to name a few. It is my goal to bring my critical thinking abilities, appreciation and respect for collaborative efforts, my devotion to public education in America, as well as my energy and enthusiasm to the position of president-elect of this fine organization.

NASBE is in some ways an ever-evolving organization as it adapts to meet the needs of its member states, but NASBE continues always to maintain our strong foundation, and the basic tenets of non-partisan service in strengthening state leadership in education policy, promoting excellence and advocating equality in education, and assuring citizen support and involvement in public education.

It is vital to keep this non-profit organization financially healthy, and to obtain constant feedback on what we do, as well as being in the forefront of emerging issues, so that we may continue to serve state boards in the very best way possible.

It has been a real privilege to represent the western states on the NASBE board for the last 15 months, and I cherish the opportunity and experience. I stand ready to represent all the state boards to the best of my ability. The encouragement and support of the Wyoming State Board of Education leaves me humbled. As President-Elect of NASBE I would be supremely honored to join the extraordinarily talented team of Diane Fladmo and Brad Bryant, and the NASBE staff, in leading this superb organization into the future.

It is with a heart grateful for all the friendships I have formed and support I have received that I ask your board to vote for me as your next President-Elect of NASBE.

Warm regards,
Dana Mann-Tavegia

Statement of Interest

I would like to join NASBE's leadership team, as president-elect, to help grow the value of NASBE for members - and beyond. NASBE currently offers valuable learning opportunities for members through study groups, special projects, and networking efforts. NASBE also serves as an important national voice on a wide array of issues that affect our students and the work we do with our state boards on their behalf. I want to strengthen our organizational ability to provide and support quality learning opportunities and explore new approaches to building the national voice, drawn from research and state experience, that NASBE brings to discussions about education policy options.

Our need for continued learning, as state board members, has never been greater. State boards are grappling with varied, and often conflicting, perspectives on how to improve student performance, reduce achievement gaps, meet issues around the No Child Left Behind Act, and respond to demographic changes that directly challenge our educational systems.

I have had extensive professional experience and public service in both state and national arenas. I would welcome the opportunity to contribute to the work of NASBE as president-elect.

STATE BOARD OF EDUCATION

April 26, 2006

Dear NASBE Colleague:

As you know, I'm running for NASBE president-elect. I believe I have the commitment and skill to serve you and the Association well, and I would like to ask for your support.

I've participated in NASBE since I became a member of the Maryland State Board of Education five years ago. I'm now in my second term and have learned a tremendous amount from both my experiences in Maryland and my work with NASBE.

NASBE, I believe, offers benefits of real value to its members and serves as an important voice on major educational issues for all our state boards – and everyone else concerned about the quality of our public schools. I want to work with you to enhance this value and increase our visibility within and beyond our membership ranks.

I have an enormous appreciation for the diversity we reflect on our state boards. I know that we have much to share with one another, and I want to work with you to take better advantage of the wide array of perspectives we bring to the NASBE table.

Our boards, over the years, have always faced huge challenges. But the challenges we face today seem to have taken on a greater urgency. Demographic changes, new sets of relationships between our states and the federal government, and the global marketplace are all combining to complicate the task of helping all our students become productive citizens and contributors to our communities and our country.

I believe I have a background that has prepared me to work with you, and on your behalf, to tackle these new challenges. My professional career has taken me into every region of our nation. I also know the national scene, with over 25 years of experience in research, policy, and public service, working closely with Republicans and Democrats.

I am grateful for your service and welcome your ideas and views. If you have any questions about my candidacy, please feel free to contact me, either by phone (301-728-1230) or email (kpizzigati@comcast.net).

I look forward to our continuing work together and ask your support for my candidacy for president-elect. Thank you for your consideration.

Sincerely,

Karabelle Pizzigati, Member
Maryland State Board of Education

JAMES (JIM) L. CRAIG, SR.

STATEMENT OF INTEREST

When I joined Ohio's State Board of Education in early 2002, I became immediately aware of the great value the Board placed on the work of the National Association of State Boards of Education. An assignment to a NASBE committee or study group was highly treasured thing, and attendance at NASBE's Annual Convention was strongly encouraged.

My past experience on NASBE's Study Group on the Changing World of Interscholastic Athletics, and my current experience on the Early Childhood Study Group have made it clear to me why my State Board places such a high priority on NASBE. For one thing, NASBE offers an opportunity to share ideas and information with other State Board members from around the country. Perhaps even more important, our organization has the potential to influence policymaking on a nationwide scale, and thus strengthen both the content and delivery of educational services to millions of students from coast to coast. I believe my prior NASBE experience, as well as my three years as Co-Chair of the Ohio State Board of Education's Achievement Committee, has put me in a solid position to take on new responsibilities within our organization.

For these reasons, I would relish the opportunity - and the honor - to serve as a NASBE Central Area Director.
