

Sample Public Service Announcements – don't just think radio as these can be used at movie theaters, school announcements, during sporting events, etc.

- Looking for a good party? Well, so are area police. But not just any party. If you're under 21, police have your number. And this weekend, that number is up. Party patrols are looking for you...do your part and don't take part.
- If you're a minor, you could be in for some major trouble this weekend. That's because local police are on party patrol. They are the ultimate party crashers. Your friends will leave with something they won't forget...a minor in possession citation...a zero tolerance ticket...It could be a night to remember.
- Planning a party with underage drinking going on? Then plan for some unexpected guests! Police in our area are on patrol, party patrol that is! That's because it's illegal for ANYONE under 21 to drink alcohol. Do the math...that means you!
- Plans for the weekend? Think again if your definition of fun involves underage drinking. That's because police in our area are participating in party patrols. That's right. We're talking plainclothes officers on the lookout for minors at parties, concerts, and clubs. If you're drinking, you're busted. Plan on it.
- Have an older brother or sister, someone who is old enough to drive and to legally drink? Well, you could both be in a heap of trouble. That's because police in our area are participating in party patrols. They could be anywhere...at the bar when someone 21 buys drinks for minors...or at the store. Don't buy yourself trouble. Be smart. Be sober.
