THREE YOUNG WOMEN, STRONG LEADERS CONFERENCES

On Friday, March 20 at Grand Valley State University, Friday, March 27 at Wayne State University, and Friday April 17 at Alma College the three host sites, Michigan ACE Network, the Michigan Women's Commission, Michigan State University Women's Resource Center, the Michigan Department of Education, Office of Career & Technical Preparation, and the U.S. Department of Labor, Women's Bureau present "Young Women, Strong Leaders."

"We are thrilled to have the opportunity to work with young women from so many higher educational institutions so that they can become the leaders tomorrow," said Judy Karandjeff, Executive Director of the Michigan Women's Commission.

The Young Women, Strong Leaders conference aims to support the personal and professional development of young women. Through skill development and professional mentoring opportunities participants will be prepared for success in their professional life.

The program includes welcome remarks by State Government Officials, Presidents of the Universities and Colleges, as well as keynote addresses at each site. The remainder of the conference includes leadership and skill building workshops and networking sessions.
