Power of Language Module: Part 1

Power of Language Module
An ELA HSCE Companion Document

As educators use Michigan’s English Language Arts standards and expectations to develop rigorous, relevant units of instruction and powerful, engaging learning activities, they will see an emphasis on effective communication including learning writing as a recursive process.

The purpose of this module is to provide guidance for teachers as they infuse grammar into their daily writing instruction. Effective writers use conventions to guide readers through text, supporting the reader in making meaning, creating images, and interacting with the text.

Linking grammar and mechanics with craft lessons makes learning experiences valuable and relevant for students. Research has shown that good writing is not produced by studying grammar in isolation. Anchor and linking mentor texts provide powerful examples for students to study language patterns. By experimenting with, imitating, and editing language, students discover how using the elements and patterns of language expands their options and empowers them as writers. Language is an evolving tool with powerful personal, cultural, economic, and political implications. Knowledge of the structures of language is essential for the effective use of language for varying purposes: a job or college application, poem, letter to a state representative, e-mail, resume, or persuasive essay.

The Power of Language Module has an overarching goal of providing teachers and students with instructional resources and learning activities that will lead to a better understanding of the structure, function, and history of the English language, and will instill in students a desire to become better communicators.

When complete, the module will include:

- Anchor and linking texts used to study the English language and its power to affect and transform lives. (Being developed)
- Print and web resources for infusing direct grammar and rhetorical skill instruction into writing instruction. (Included here as general resource lists)
- Print and web resources for vocabulary development. (Being developed)
- Print and web resources for grammar and rhetoric skill review organized by ACT College Readiness Standard, including how the standards are assessed and what students need to know to meet the standards. (Included here)
- Information and resources for meeting other national standards requirements and for preparation for other assessments, (SAT/NAEP/AP English). (Being developed)

Included in this document is a chart identifying the ACT English (Mechanics, Usage, and Rhetoric) standards linked to examples of how they are assessed on the ACT, what students need to know, and both web link and professional text resources. These same resources provide support for infusing grammar instruction throughout instructional units. Specific examples for each of the ACT standards are included here. Part one of the module is being released to meet the needs of teachers and students as they prepare for the 2007 MME/ACT assessment. Other components of the module will be available at a later date.

“Grammar and mechanics are not rules to be mastered as much as tools to serve a writer in creating a text readers will understand.” — Jeff Anderson, Mechanically Inclined

“…if students aren’t regularly held accountable for their correctness, it just won’t seem important to them. Imagine a math class where it “doesn’t matter if you get it right.”” — Jim Burke, The English Teacher’s Companion

“Grammar is the soul of humankind . . . the secret muse of all expression, the portrait painter of life’s emotions. . . . When students come to share this vision, grammar bridges the world of living to the world of writing, reading, and speaking.” — Harry Noden, Image Grammar

“All native speakers of a language have more grammar in their heads than any grammar book will ever contain.” Our job as teachers is to help our students discover this knowledge.”

“Good writing is not produced by grammar study in isolation from writing, as research has shown again and again… If improving writing is our primary goal, then it is time for a major change in how we teach grammar.” — Constance Weaver

“Whenever my students aren’t successful, I ask myself these questions:
- What have I done to teach this grammar or mechanics pattern?
- Have I immersed students in correct models? Visually and orally?
- Did I post an example (through a wall chart or insert pasted in their writer’s notebooks)?
- Have I modeled correcting this type of error in focused edits?
- Have I given students ample practice in editing this particular type of error?
- Is the item on the class’s editor’s checklist?
- Have I directed the students to edit their own writing for this type of error on multiple occasions?
- Is this mechanical error important enough to warrant doing all of the aforementioned work to teach it?”
