

What Do I Do if My Child Does Not Speak English? Parent Guide #22

Public schools are responsible for testing and placing children in the right program. When possible, schools provide the test in the language spoken by your child.

If the language difference makes learning too difficult, your child may go to "English as a Second Language" (ESL) or a bilingual class. Your child will learn the same material as the other children in the same grade.

Suggestions for families:

- Learning a second language should not replace your language.
- Support your child to speak, read and write your family language.
- Children are often quiet when they are learning a new language.
- Children can learn two or more languages at the same time.
- There are benefits to learning more than one language, and it is easier at a young age.
- Children may be confused at times as they try to understand two languages at once.
- Learning a second language takes time and support, but it is worth it.
