Although we celebrate all different types of holidays, in the end we are all the same. We are different only because we believe in different things. Some people celebrate Hanukkah and some celebrate Christmas. We are all the same in the end, we are all humans. We all are equal, we all get the same rights. So just think about it and think fairly because we are all the same.

We are one world (Poem)

We are one world, through we come from different lands. language doesn't matter nor the color of our hands together we can learn to live in peace and harmony. Learning, helping, growing together in this land of unity. We are one world, we are one voice. crying out to every nation that peace is our first choice. Eventhough we are not the same. we are the same in some type of way. Even if it the color of your hair its unity. The end !!

equal. Just because people celebrate other holiday's mean it's wrong. When cultures celebrate holiday it's because what they believe is true. You can't criticize them because you don't believe the same thing. So were all equal and should be treated fairly.

Even though many people celebrate different holidays that don't mean they are different. First, the diversity is really in their religion and holidays. But we still are the same. Like one culture don't celebrate Christmas. But we celebrate Christmas and our birthdays. Some culture don't celebrate their birthdays. It's a lot of religion in the world. Also we are similar because some people might celebrate a holiday but they might not buy a gift for that day. Since people celebrate different holidays, some people think that they are really different. But if you know them you shouldn't make fun of them. In conclusion, celebrating different cultures (holidays) still don't mean that you're really different.

In fact, spending time with your family is what the holidays are all about.

Why doing this project I learned
how to make things for different holidays.
I learned how they do the candles for Kwanzaa. They have oil. Every day they light a candle. Kwanzaa is 7 day.
The candles help them get oil. It takes 7 days to reproduce more oil. Christmas is only one day.

Eventhough there is diversity in everybody by the holidays we celebrate. But we're all some what are the same by our well-being. For example Jewish religion celebrate Hanakkah. While I on the other hand celebrate Christmas. The Jewish religion holiday is for eight days for their principle. But the holiday I celebrate is for two. Since we celebrate different holidays, that automatically makes us different. Well, we all go to school, we all wear clothes, and go shopping of some sort. In conclusion this is why we are different but the same.

Even though there is a diversity in religion and celebrated days, we are all the same people. Many people think that just because someone is of other culture and doesn't celebrate a certain day, that they are different. They begin to assume different things about the other culture. For instance, one culture believing that another culture is full of bad people, and saying bad things about them. In actuality, we are all the same people no matter what our beliefs are. We all have goals and ambitions in the backseat of our belief-driven car. Saying that just because you believe in different things, that you are less, or more than someone else of a different culture. When you say that, you are imposing a sense of segregation. Let's bring integration through religion instead. As you can see, just because people have different beliefs, doesn't mean they are totally and completely different from you and me.

while I was working on
"ABC'S of Michigan - many ways of learning" I learned that everyone
doesn't celebrate the same holidays.
For example, I may celebrate christmas
and someone else may celebrate Kwanza. No matter what holiday they celebrate we are all the same. We are all equal and we are all humans.

While doing this project I learned that Kwanzaa was important and very religious and the kids love it because of ~~spirit~~. Also Christmas is Jesus's birthday. And the Jews celebrate Channukah.
