SUMMARY

On agency determination that a state building is in surplus to its needs, the agency must notify the State Historic Preservation Office (SHPO).

The SHPO applies the criteria of National Register eligibility to specified state agency surplus buildings and advises the Department of Technology, Management and Budget (DTMB) on the appropriateness of attaching a historic preservation covenant to the deed of the property.

It also reviews plans and specifications for interior and exterior rehabilitation work to ensure that they meet the Secretary of Interior's Standards for Rehabilitation and Guidelines for Rehabilitating Historic Buildings (Standards).
