PUBLIC COMMENTS (3 minutes each)

Michael Betzold

Last August, after a perfunctory review period of a few weeks, the DNR approved a new contract for the Grand Prix. No one on this committee raised any objection. The outcome was never in doubt. Month after month, for years, we have come to these meetings and pointed out how this extremely intrusive corporate auto race is completely incompatible with this very precious public park and how year-round access to this island is vital to the health and welfare of Detroiters. Since you are supposed to be stewards of Belle Isle, it shouldn't even be necessary to keep telling you these things. But all we get are occasional patronizing reassurances that you are listening to us. Obviously, you're not. Or you have a wildly different view of what stewardship is-because the Grand Prix defies the core missions of the DNR, the Belle Isle Conservancy and even this committee. The contract the DNR rubber stamped 13 months ago was for three years and has a clause that reads: "The initial term of this agreement may be extended for an additional two-year term upon written notice by Permittee and written approval by Permitter." Three people at this table have the power to unilaterally pull the plug on this event: Ron Olson, Michele Hodges, Bud Denker. I'm not holding my breath on them. But if some other member went on record now, opposing any further extension of the race after 2021, it would have a huge impact. It would show someone here actually has been not just listening to the public but paying attention. The DNR's own surveys show park users overwhelmingly oppose the race. Such a declaration would take some guts and independence. But you'd have plenty of good company. Other civic and community leaders are not afraid to defy Roger Penske. You would join the citizens of this community who care deeply about their public space, their environment, their family reunions, their weddings, this place where they can run, walk, bike, or just sit by the water. We would welcome you on the right side of this issue. We aren't going to stop talking and protesting until the Grand Prix takes all its supposed benefits somewhere else, somewhere more appropriate than here.
