

Woodland

The Woodland Gallery features a diorama of a Michigan riverbank during the late Woodland Period. A canoe with furs rests on the shore, and sounds of a northern forest in October fill the air. The reader rails provide information about European visitors, such as Jacques Marquette and Jean Nicolet, and the importance of the fur trade during the 17th century.