Yes! I am planning to have a baby.

Are there other things besides my health I should think about?
- Do you have the support of your partner, family and those around you?
- Does your health plan pay for programs to help you stop smoking? Call the number on your ID card.
- Are there other kinds of help or support you can get?
- On average it costs about $260,700 to raise a child from birth to age 17.

I want to decide my own future. I can choose to wait until I’m ready to have a baby.

How do I plan to wait until I’m ready to get pregnant?
You can ask your health care provider about your birth control choices. No matter what type of birth control you choose, regular visits with your doctor are important. Make sure you understand how to use your birth control. Ask if it is still the best birth control choice for you.

What if I am not sure my birth control worked, or I forgot to use my birth control?
Emergency contraception can be taken within five days to prevent pregnancy. Ask your doctor or pharmacist. It is meant as backup birth control only. It is not as effective as the correct and consistent use of birth control.

What about cost?
If you are worried about how to pay for your birth control, tell your doctor cost is a concern for you. If you have a health plan, call the number on your card.
On average it costs about $260,700 to raise a child from birth to age 17.

Will my birth control keep me from getting a sexually transmitted disease (STD)?
NO. However if you are sexually active, using condoms and other birth control methods together will greatly reduce your risk of pregnancy and STDs, including HIV/AIDS.

Not having sex is the only guarantee against pregnancy and STDs, including HIV/AIDS.
The only way to be sure you won’t get pregnant is not to have sex. Using birth control the right way and every time you have sex will make it much less likely you will become pregnant accidentally.
