

Child Find

Child Find is part of the federal special education law known as the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), that requires schools identify, locate, and evaluate all children, aged birth through 21 years, who have disabilities and may be entitled to special education and related services. Michigan is the only state which has a state law mandating (or requiring) special education for students with disabilities birth to 26 years of age. This law is known as the Michigan Mandatory Special Education Act (MMSE) and is part of the Revised School Code.

The Child Find Process

Child Find is an active process for identifying students suspected of having a disability. The first step requires providing information to the public regarding the availability of special education services. Intermediate school districts (ISDs) post public awareness efforts for all districts within their ISD Plan. Some districts post this information on their websites. Announcements through local media, meetings, public health departments, and state education departments are also avenues of public notice. These notices must be posted annually to ensure all districts continue their efforts to seek out children and students who may need special education and related services.

When a parent, educator, doctor, other individual suspects a child may have a disability, a request for a special education evaluation can be made to the student's teacher or administrator in the district. Within 10 school days of receipt of a written request for an initial evaluation of a student suspected of having a disability, and before any formal evaluations take place, the district will provide you with written notice and, when necessary shall request written consent to evaluate. The district will provide you with information about your family rights and procedural safeguards.

Upon receipt of signed consent, a district may evaluate the student and determine if there is a need for special education and related services. Child Find evaluations are conducted at no cost to the parents.

Intermediate School Districts

ISDs must have a plan for the delivery of special education programs and services, including their Child Find efforts to identify, locate, and evaluate children suspected of having a disability, as well as a list of individuals who can be contacted for questions or to request an evaluation. The ISD and associated school districts must have policies and procedures to identify, locate, and evaluate individuals who are wards of the court, homeless, attend private schools, are incarcerated in jails or correctional facilities, or who are enrolled in adult education and who may have a disability under the IDEA and need special education and related services, even if they were not receiving special education before they entered the facility. Families should contact their local ISD or school district if they suspect their child has a disability.
