II. NON-MEDICAID: SCHOOLS	Birth to 6		Typically, unless a student is certified for special education services they are rarely receiving any mental health services in school. Sometimes schools have social workers or counselors that are available for general education students, but they are usually paid out of grant or general funds for that school district. These trauma services provided in the schools may not be specifically identifiable, and these students are usually referred into the community to receive these services.
