Growing Up and Staying Healthy: Understanding HIV and Other STIs A Module for Grades 7-8

There are three forms of assessment in the Michigan Model for Health[™] lessons. One form, curriculum-embedded assessment, is present at the end of the lessons in the form of rubrics and checklists for scoring student work. These assessments were developed specifically for the instructional activities in the lessons and are excellent classroom-level tools for assessing student performance on the knowledge and skills taught in Growing Up and Staying Healthy: Understanding HIV and Other STIs. Embedded assessments are listed in the Time and Materials Chart and noted in the Preparation section at the beginning of each lesson.

A second type of assessment consists of items that have been selected from the database of the State Collaborative on Assessment and Student Standards, Health Education Assessment Program (SCASS-HEAP), a project sponsored by the Council of Chief State School Officers (CCSSO). The items were selected based on their alignment with Growing Up and Staying Healthy: Understanding HIV and Other STIs lessons, and are suitable for classroom, building, and district-level assessments in health education. The item numbers published in the charts that follow, represent assessment items in the SCASS-HEAP database, available in flash drive or web-based formats. In order for you to access the items, your state must be participating in the national SCASS-HEAP project. If you are teaching in a SCASS-HEAP state, the items may be accessed by school staff who sign a security agreement and receive training in the use of the items. As you access the items, you need to be sure to select the version you are using: abstinence-based or abstinence-only.

Also included behind this tab is the third form of assessment, a pre-test and post-test for this module. This instrument will help educators assess the change in knowledge, skills, and attitudes as a result of teaching this curriculum. Electronic copy masters of the tests are included on the Teacher Resources flash drive packaged with this manual.
