Purpose of Design Advisories

Design Advisories are being initiated to provide emphasis to manuals or guidance on development issues. The intent of the advisories is not to provide instructions or to replace design manuals or standards, but to place focus on areas where guidance is not being consistently followed. Design Advisories may also be generated when guidance changes are being issued to bring attention to the change and to provide an explanation or background for the need to change.

Design Advisories will be similar to those issued by the Construction Division and will be indexed with the same referencing as our Design Manuals, Guides and Standards. By matching our existing indexing structure you will easily be able to reference the appropriate section of the appropriate manual to better understand the Advisory purpose.
