

Honoring Miners and Their Communities

Iron Industry Heritage Plaques are Forging our Future

Over a decade ago the Michigan Iron Industry Museum launched a capital campaign to become a year-round facility, a stronger educational resource, and a tourist hub. Thanks to grants and the support of the community, the museum added a new wing, a store, a road with direct access to US 41, comfortable auditorium seating, and two interpretive trails that connect to the Iron Ore Heritage Trail Network.

You can help continue the work of the Iron Industry Museum and take the opportunity to honor the extraordinary individuals whose strength, ingenuity, and hard work built Michigan's iron ranges. Photo and name plaques now encircle the museum's commons and will expand with long-term exhibits as a tribute to miners and their families. The donor levels are:

Donations of $1,000

Photograph and name for a 10" x 10" plaque

Donations of $250

Photograph and name for a 5" x 5" plaque

Donations of $100

Name for a 5" x 2.5" plaque

Our work is not done. Still to come is the restoration of an icon of early mining, the "Yankee" locomotive, added outdoor interpretation, amenities to serve trail users, growth of our educational offerings, and exhibit upgrades.
