to work colabortively with three advanced wood working students and their teacher Mr. Harrison. The Art Department combined artistic expression to include two medians; wood and painting. Because the piece needed to be seen from both sides, designs were planned to include negative space.

Devon Taylor and Noah wigans both learned how the arts are connected to math. For the wood project we worked with the art teacher to create a 3-D art project from wood. we had to use math to figure the dementions cutting the designs, making stencils. we encountered a few problems and only had to start over once, over all It was interesting to see how combining wood, paint, and Varnish created unique patterns and forms.

Gary Sabin learned to improve his skill saw skills and drawing skills as many adjustments were needed to make the cuts I enjoyed being part of the artist process.
