Background

The Michigan Department of Environment, Great Lakes, and Energy (EGLE) has records of approximately 3,400 restrictive covenants (RCs) recorded on property deeds in Michigan as part of remedial or corrective actions implemented under Part 201, Environmental Remediation, and Part 213, Leaking Underground Storage Tanks, of the Natural Resources and Environmental Protection Act, Public Act 451 of 1994, as amended. These statutes require long-term monitoring and reporting for land or resource use restrictions in some circumstances (previously described in the 2018 Pilot Project Statewide Assessment of Restrictive Covenants report). The Remediation and Redevelopment Division (RRD) developed a process for the 2017 Pilot Project Statewide Assessment of Restrictive Covenants to perform reviews of properties subject to these RCs. This is the third such annual review of RCs placed at Part 201 and Part 213 facilities.

2020 Project Objective

As part of EGLE's work plan for the United States Environmental Protection Agency 2020 Fiscal Year 128(a) Brownfield Grant, the RRD agreed to conduct a review of RCs under Project Management Task 1. This task is performed to evaluate compliance and monitoring with RCs. This year's review focused on properties in Oakland County, which has the second-highest number of restrictions imposed in Michigan (behind Wayne County). Oakland County consists of both urbanized and rural areas, some of which utilize groundwater for drinking water. Although Part 213 sites make up the vast majority of properties with institutional controls (about 14 times more including Notices of Corrective Action and RCs), eight Part 201 sites were included in this year's review to see if there were any major differences in compliance between the two categories. Table 1 breaks down the restrictions that are recorded in Oakland County.

Outputs

The outputs of this project are:

1. Project memo
2. Database of site information
3. Individual checklists of properties selected for review

Outcomes

The following outcomes will continue to advance our ability to conduct long-term monitoring of RCs.

1. Increased number of sites tracked for compliance in the LRUR database which can be analyzed in future years.
2. Expand outreach to new owners of sites that have restrictions.
3. Improve identification of sites with more complex restrictions which may have the potential for impacting off-site properties through various exposure pathways and to ensure that restrictions are protective of human health and the environment.

Process

The reviews were conducted by a team consisting of project managers from the Warren District Office, Kim Ethridge and Katie Noetzel, who conducted a majority of the reviews, and Ron Smedley and Kevin Schrems, who developed the project and analyzed the results. Ron and Kevin thanks Kim and Katie for offering their time to implement the project and the field support that they provided.

The review team selected 42 sites in Oakland County for examination (see Table 2 for more information about each site). The team used the processes described in the 2017 and 2018 reports to prepare a checklist for each review and conduct the site visit. Specifically, both in-person site walks and less invasive visual reviews, restricted to publicly accessible areas, allowed flexibility in how the assessments were conducted. In addition, the team used site maps and street views from Google Earth to identify locations, site conditions, and land development over time. The goal of the project is to achieve consistent data and application of checklists across all properties. In addition, a smaller number of reviewers ensures more consistency. The reviewers provided copies of the RCs and the previously approved “EGLE Property Owner’s Guide to Restrictive Covenants Imposed at Sites of Environmental Contamination” document to the property owners/operators when appropriate.

Data from the completed checklists was entered into the LRUR Access database. Use of the database allows for a consistent evaluation of site conditions and makes it easier to conduct calculations, sort data, and convert tables to Excel.

Results

The team utilized the same categories for describing compliance with restrictions as previously used in the 2018 report and included a new category for remote reviews. The four categories are:

1. No evidence of compliance issues
2. Noticeable conditions needing attention
3. Substantial non-compliance
4. Full evaluation not conducted

Of the 42 sites reviewed:

- 34 (81%) had no evidence of compliance issues at the time of the reviews.
- Only 3 sites (7%) had minor issues related to exposure barriers.
- 5 sites (12%) did not have full on-site evaluations conducted, but remote reviews did not show compliance issues.
- No sites that were reviewed had substantial non-compliance.
- 21 (50%) had an ownership change from the time when the RC was filed to the current time.
- 22 (52%) had protective structures, 19 of which all appeared to retain their integrity (3 were not determined/not applicable).
- 6 (14%) sites have drinking water wells, 4 of which were not subject to the restrictions, 1 of which requires additional investigation to determine compliance with restrictions, and 1 in compliance.
- 26 (62%) sites had owners who were aware of the restrictions, 16 were not applicable as the owners or representatives were not able to be contacted.

Overall, the analysis found that most properties’ conditions were in compliance with the restrictions as filed. Some properties required minor repairs to concrete and asphalt areas in order to maintain cap integrity. Properties seemed to be generally the same land use and type of business since the restrictions were filed, i.e.: automotive repair, gas stations, commercial, and industrial uses. There were no residential property uses at any of the sites. A complete list of results can be found in Table 3.

Action Items

- Ask IC TAPS about volunteering to do five or more reviews per year per district.
- Revise questions in the Checklist to ensure proper interpretation by reviewers.
- Add checklists to Environmental Mapper as attachments to recorded institutional controls or note availability of checklists in the Environmental Response Networked Information Exchange (ERNIE) to allow project managers to access for long-term monitoring of sites.
- Double check local unit of government listings in ERNIE and the Storage Tank Information Database (SID) to ensure correct location of sites, i.e., townships vs. cities or villages.
- Recommend that the 3 properties identified with minor exposure barrier issues be inspected in 1 year to determine whether additional action is needed.
- Recommend that the 1 property with a drinking water well present be further reviewed to determine whether the well is in compliance with the restriction or is not subject to the restriction. This may include discussion with the local health department and review of well permitting records.
