

Child Support in Michigan: Facts & Figures

County and state child support offices in Michigan provide services for more than 830,000 children and their families. Anyone can request services from the Michigan Child Support Program by completing an application. All families who receive public assistance are required to cooperate with the program to establish paternity and child support orders if it is safe for them to do so. The program's mission is to achieve the well-being of children and self-sufficiency of families by delivering consistent, innovative and holistic services. These services promote healthy relationships between parents and children, ensure parents fulfill their financial obligations to their children and ensure families have access to all possible income sources.

By the numbers

Race and/or ethnicity data:

Race and/or ethnicity data is available for around 90% of parents and dependents in the Michigan Child Support Program. About half are recorded as white, a third Black, with the rest made up of a variety of other races/ethnicities, with the largest populations being Hispanic (4%), Asian or Pacific Islander (<1%), and Native American (<1%).

Program funding:

The federal government pays 66% of eligible state and county program expenses. The federal government also makes incentive payments to Michigan for its performance in five areas of the program, including disbursed collections. Michigan estimates it will receive approximately $25.8 million for fiscal year 2020. The federal performance incentives are shared between the counties and the state.
