Accreditation: Checking for quality

Accreditation is another way of assessing health plan quality. An outside organization checks to see whether the plan has the right systems and people in place to do a good job providing health care.

NCQA - Accredited by the National Committee for Quality Assurance.

The categories

Doctors' Communication and Service:

Members in the plan believe all of their doctors and health care providers do a good job explaining things to them and their children, and that they spend enough time with them and their children.

Getting Care:

Members in the plan believe they get the care they need for themselves and their children and that they get the care quickly.

Keeping Kids Healthy:

Children in the plan get regular checkups and important shots that help protect them against serious illness.

Living with Illness:

The plan takes care of members with asthma, diabetes and high blood pressure by giving them tests, checkups and the right medicine.

Taking Care of Women:

Women in the plan get tests for breast and cervical cancer, and for an infection called Chlamydia. These tests help to find these diseases early. This gives women more choices for treatment and a better chance of survival. Moms in the plan also get care before and after their baby is born to help keep mom and baby healthy.
