

Assessing and Managing Suicide Risk (AMSR) Training

AMSR's research-informed risk formulation model helps health and behavioral health professionals feel confident navigating challenging conversations and offers key strategies for providing compassionate care to people at risk for suicide. Authorized expert trainers lead AMSR trainings, teaching professionals essential skills through videos, live demonstrations, and paired and written practice.

AMSR has been working since 2006 to train clinicians on how to provide effective treatment for patients and clients who are at risk of suicide. Over 70,000 mental health professionals have attended AMSR workshops in the United States and abroad.

AMSR is offered in-person, as well as a virtual format. *Request AMSR Training here.***

Funds for this training are provided by the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration (SAMHSA). All SAMHSA-funded trainings require participation in an evaluation survey before and after your training. Each survey takes less than 10 minutes to complete. Assessing the impact of suicide prevention trainings is important for measuring our grant activity and is critical to ensuring continued funding for suicide prevention efforts in Michigan.
