

Crises Assistance and Prevention

Schools must respond to, minimize the impact of, and prevent school and personal crises. This requires school-wide and classroom-based approaches for

- A. immediate emergency response – at a site and with other local schools and the surrounding community
- (b) immediate aftermath assistance
- (c) follow-up – in the days and weeks after an event,
- (d) prevention in the future – taking steps at school and in the community to prevent those future events that are preventable and reduce the impact when crises occur (e.g., enhancing school safety, violence reduction, suicide prevention, child abuse prevention, processes to mediate and resolve conflict, a emphasis on improving human relations, promoting a caring school culture, enhancing coping, resilience, problem solving, refining institutional response to crises).

Key overlapping mechanisms in this arena are a planning and development workgroup and a crisis response team. All those involved in this work need preparation related to emergency response procedures, physical and psychological first-aid, aftermath interventions, and so forth.

After a crisis, the first concern is to ensure physical safety and medical first aid; this is followed immediately by attention to psychological considerations. Then, the emphasis is on the school's need to regain stability and a sense of normality so that students and staff can resume learning and teaching. Included here is attention to follow-up care as needed.

Clearly, the scope of the event (major school-wide crises as contrasted to small group or individual crises) profoundly shapes how many responders are needed during the various phases of the crisis. Also, difficulties that must be dealt with during the crisis itself raise many problems that are quite distinct from those arising in the immediate aftermath and in the days and weeks following the event (e.g., hysteria and fear as contrasted with grief reactions and post traumatic stress).

The proper handling of school crises is essential to minimizing negative impact on learning and mental health. Comprehensive crisis intervention planning and implementation provides ways for school personnel, students, and families to return to normalcy as quickly as feasible, address residual (longer-term) psychosocial problems, and explore preventive measures for the future.
