D. Petitioner's claims or counterclaims:

"The subject property consists of 914 steel cylinders that are approximately 4 ¼ ft tall and 2 ½ ft wide. Petitioner uses the cylinders in its refrigerant recycling and reclamation business. Petitioner receives used refrigerant fluids from customers at its location in the City of Livonia. It retrieves the cylinders from its facility in the City of Lincoln Park and places the used fluids into the cylinders. Petitioner stores the cylinders at the Lincoln Park facility pending the fluid recycling or reclamation process. When Petitioner is ready to process the fluid contained in a cylinder, it retrieves the cylinder from Lincoln Park, transports the cylinder to Livonia, recycles/reclaims the fluids, and returns the cylinder to Lincoln Park. This use fits with the statutory definition of 'industrial processing,' which begins with movement from raw materials storage. Even if this use does not fall within the definition of industrial processing, it does fall within the definition of 'direct integrated support.' That definition includes receiving or storing equipment and materials for industrial processing, at the industrial processing site or at another site. Fitting within either of these definitions renders the subject property 'eligible manufacturing person property' under MCL 211.9m and MCL 211.9n, such that the subject property qualifies for eligible manufacturing personal property exemption from taxation. Petitioner timely submitted a property claim for the eligible manufacturing personal property exemption for the subject property to Respondent's 2022 March Board of Review. It denied the exemption, which Petitioner respectfully submits to the Tribunal was an erroneous decision."

E. Respondent's claims or counterclaims:

"Respondent contends that it lawfully and uniformly assessed the subject property."

IV. PENDING MOTIONS OR DISCOVERY:

F. Motions: None.

G. Discovery: Discovery is closed unless otherwise stated below.

Failure to respond or show good cause may result in dismissal of the case or the conducting of a default hearing.
